On the tste of Pines — a large square island off the southwest coast of Cuba, flat except for ridges of granite and marble thrusting sharply out of the earth - the changes are dramatic.

twenty years ago, on the eve of the revolution, the island had 11,000 inhabitants, and its main industry — and a considerable part of its population — was found behind the barbed-wire fences that surrounded the Presidio, the main Cuban penitentiary. The prison, which was modeled after Joliet Prison in Illinois, was closed in 1966 be-cause of fear that U.S.-sponsored exile groups might attempt to seize the sparsely populated island, free the thousands of anu-revolutionaries incarcerated in the Presidio and use the island as a staging area for an attack on Cuba.

These fears also encouraged the government to begin a program to increase the population of the island so as to be in a better position to defend it.

By David Andelman .

BELGRADE, June 20 (NYT) — President Tito today warned the United States and the Soviet Union of the dangers of their continued conflict, which, he said, threatens war "not only at a local level, but even on a world scale."

In his keynote oddress opening Yugoslavia's Communist Party Congress, President Tito, 86, also reiterated bis nation's intention to defend its own independent position between East and West, but he pointed to a range of internal and external problems which, be said, continue to threaten this position.

The 92-page message to the party congress was being described by Yugoslav and Western diplomats as a major restatement by President Tito of his political philosophy. It comes 30 years after he first broke with the Soviet Union and Stalin in 1948 and at the start of what may prove to be a long and difficult peried of transition to a new national

To Retain Textile Empire By Joesph Fitchett

France's grandest millionaires. Marcel Boussac, 89, offered today to put up most of his personal property to save his troubled textile mills.

Even this dramatic gesture appeared to be too little and too late to avert bankruptey and save thousands of jobs in 21 plants in the Boussac textile organization. Major creditor banks told a commercial court here that they op-posed the rescue offer because they already had obtained liens against some of Mr. Boussac's private wealth.

Technically, Mr. Boussac is not personally responsible for the lia-bilities of the texule companies he has controlled for more than a half-century. #### U.S. Factory Site Is Radioactive; It Explodes When Scraped, Too

WASHINGTON, W. Va., June 20 (AP) - The ground erupts like a miniature volcano when a bulldozer scrapes it. Turning the soit with a shovel sends sparks flying. The dirt is radioactive, and both federal officials and the L.B. Foster Co., whose pipe-making plant is over the patch of ground, want to get rid of it. But how?

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission says the soil is laced with thorium — plus zirconium, a nnaradioactive but highly combusti-hle substance. The combination makes the material almost impossi-

Warkmen experienced the combustibility when they tried to install a machine in the Foster building. They were digging a bole when there was an explosinn followed by a flash fire. Sparks shot up 30 fect, smoldering on the ceiling.

According in Wood County emergency services director George Fix. once "they had a bulldozer in there and it was doing some grading and it got into it and it melted the tracks right off of it. The NRC says the level of radiation presents no immediate health hazard in the 70 workers at the plant.

In addition to wanting the contaminated soil removed, NRC investigators also want to know how the thorium got there. Until 1957 the property was a farm. Since then, three companies bave owned the property just south of Parkersburg on the Ohin River, and all three — Foster. Amax Inc., and Carborundum Co. — disclaim responsibility for the dumping.

A Foster official, who asked not to be identified, said: "You can draw your own conclusions as to how it got there. The farmer who was planting his corn there certainly didn't bury it."

On Land Marked for Industry

Israelis Raze Houses of Negev Bedouin

By William E. Farrell

ABU TULUL BEDOUIN ENCAMPMENT, Israel, June 20 (NYT) — After miles of travel over an ill-defined series of ruts and little gullies that the locals call a road. a traveler's eyes, suffused with the stark unending desert landscape, catches sight of a modest garden and an even more modest orchard with apples, figs and almonds.

Near this pleasing bit of green in a surrounding of alkali white are the crushed remains of a house, surrealist jumble of cinder blocks, twisted iron window grates and a mash of household items.

The house was the home of a Bedouin tribesman and his family until last month, when it bulldozed by order of Israel's Green Patrol, created a few years ago to police the Negev.

The force has only a dozen men who work under Minister of Agriculture Ariel Sharon, a hero of the 1973 war, known for hawkish views

The action by the natrol has provoked a storm of protest in Israel over tactics and has focused attention on a minority group, the Negev Bedouin, whose presence in the desert dates back to A.D. 636.

Land problems regarding the Be-douin are old and complicated, in-volving deeds or the lack of them and the contention of the tribesmen that their historic presence in the desert is in itself a right to the land. For many years, these issues simmered below the surface because the lands of the Negev were not regarded as having much value. That changed as the Israelis set about transforming parts of the desert into farms, industrial areas and towns.

Nomadic Ways Abandoned

With this came changes in the Bedouin way of life. Many of them began to abandon their nomadic ways in stay in one place and work

"Until now, I have served faithfully in the army," he said. "But now f don't know how I can continue to

A number of the dwellings were razed May 17 and some of the reports by the Bedouin charge that women were harassed that children were threatened and that personal belongings were destroyed by the bulldozers because the residents did not have time to pack. There has been a spate of editori-

The Boussac crisis has become a test of new economic policies of the government of Prime Minister Raymand Barre, who is emphasizing industrial efficiency and restricting credits to private companies that have failed to modernize. It is a sharp contrast to previous French economic policies that were de-signed to keep factories open and provide jobs, even artificially.

Workers Cut

During the late 1960s, the Boussac empire began to run into financial trouble at its core, the spinning and weaving mills in the Vosges mountains in eastern France. The textile companies sank deeper in the 1970s, and their labor force dwindled from a postwar high of 33,000 to, 11,500 today. PHILADELPHIA, June 20 (UPI) A study conducted for the city of Philadelphia has concluded that female police officers are not as efficient as their male counterparts in performing patrol duties.

The study, conducted by Bartell Associated Inc. of State College, Pai, in conjunction with a court directive that the city hire more female police officers, said that women "require more assistance to make arresis, are assaulted more ofteo, have more vehicle accidents and tend to sustain more injuries than males."

The researchers found no significant differences between men and women in handling an assist of an officer, a demented individual, an arrest, a holdup in progress, a highway disturbance, transportation of a prisoner, a drunken person or a hospital case. And they rated wom-en higher in the handling of a man with a gun, family disturbances and They emphasized that the study was only preliminary and that fur-ther "scientifically controlled research" was needed to confirm or refute the findings.

Justice Department Gets Park Case for Decisions

WASHINGTON, June 20 (WP)

— The Senate Ethics Committee has turned over to the Justice Department possible perjury cases stemming from cash payments which accused South Korean agent Tongsun Park said he made to

The committee's first official report of its investigation of alleged South Korean influence buying points out conflicts between the sworn testimony of Mr. Park and aides to Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., the late Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., and former Sen. Jack Mil-ler, R-lowa.

The committee chairman. Sen.

Adlai Stevenson, D-III., said at a press conference vesterday that since "all the statements were made under oath, that possibility [of per-jury] exists. But he also said that the committee had made no recommendation to Justice Department prosecutors on how they should judge the different stories.

None of the senators is involved in the conflicting testimony, because Mr. Park allegedly made the payments through the aides. Without corroboration from an independent source or document, it is difficult to turn such one-on-one conflicts into a perjury case, a Jus-tice Department official said yes-

At the State Department yesterday, the official line was that there are no present plans to cancel's Chile's order. However, a department source said privately, "it's a safe bet that the wisdom of going ahead with this transaction is going to be regioned."

Underlying the controversy has been strong and continuing criticism of the Chilean regime headed by President Augusto Pinochet, His government, which came to power in a bloody 1973 coup that brought about the killing of President Salvador Allende, has been accused of murdering, torturing and imprisoning its domestic opponents.

In response to these charges,

In line with what State Department officials described as "gener-ally established practice." the administration has been allowing socalled pipeline military equipment — weapons and other materiel contracted for before the congressional ban went into effect - to be shipped to Chile.

These shipments did not cause much of a stir until late last month when the International Longshore-men's and Warehousemen's Union received word that its locals in San Francisco would be called on to load the bomh parts aboard the vessel Seajet in that port.

In 1975, the ILWU's annual convention called for a hoycott of all cargo to and from Chile. Clung that internal resolution, the union refused to touch the bomb parts identified by the Air Force as the tail assemblies for 25-pound practice bombs - after their arrival in San Francisco.

After the parts sat on the docks for several days, the government had them moved to a warehouse at the Oakland Army Base. ILWU of-ficials said yesterday they had received information that another vessel, the American Charger, has been engaged to pick up the bomb parts at the base on or about Mon-

NAIROBI, June 20 - Three years ago, when the drought was bad and the cattle were dying in great numbers. Joseph Mukutu called his eldest son aside and led him silently through the fields of withered corn stalks.

"Patrick," the ailing and aging father (inally said. "There are no jobs here in Machakos, and without a job and money you cannot help the family. You must go to the city. There will be work in Nairobi."

The legal minimum wage in Nairobi is only $43 a month and unemployment runs as high as 40 percent. But not knowing this, Patrick Mukutu, 23, came to the city anyway. And another name was added to the rural exodus in Africa.

According to the International Labor Organization, 60 million persons — half the adult population of the continent — cannot find work.

It was six months before a friend from the same tribe found Mr. Mufor $72 a month. From his salary, he manages to scrape together $30 every month to send to his father, wife and five children back on the farm. It is enough to buy two big bags of corn, which will last them about a month.

Mr. Mukutu lives in a one-room shanty without electricity or water and he dreams of saving enough money to buy a small shop — per-haps a curio shop — and then to rebuild the herd, so he can be with his wife and children again. But increasingly. Nairobi is replacing the farm as the focus of his dreams and plans, and the other day be began taking driving lessons in the hope of getting a better city job as a

From Kenya to the Ivory Coast. from Chad to Botswana, millions of young Africans today are following the same path as Mr. Mukutu. fleeing the traditions of the farm for the promises of the city.  and strained many overcrowded cities almost to the breaking point.

Lagos, for instance, has grown from a city of 300,000 in 1968 to 3 million today; Nouakchott, Mauritania, from 5,000 to 225,000 in 18 years; Abidjan, Ivory Coast, from 6,000 to 500,000 in 30 years. The predictable results are slums, crime, psychological trauma and economies that simply cannot expand fast enough to provide jobs or social services for the world's youngest and fastest-growing continental population.

Like Senegal in West Africa, Kenya has given top national priority to education, spending one-third of the national budget on it. But white-collar vacancies are virtually nonexistent, and a survey reported that of the 1,800 graduates of Nairobi University this year, 13 percent will find no employment

The International Labor Organization estimates that Africa will have to create 150 million new jobs by the year 2000 to reach anything near full economic capacity. But the goal is probably no more attainable than is Kenya's promise to provide full employment by 1980. Meanwhile, no government in Africa provides unemployment bene-

Dr. Leonard Hamilton of Brock-haven National Laboratory cited recent studies concerning the health effects of coal-burning facilities. He said that the findings are analogous to the discovered link between eigarette smoking and lung cancer.

Dr. Hamilton said that sulfates

The Word of Mr. Vance

Speaking before the House International Relations Committee, Cyrus Vance, the secretary of state, had a dual purpose. One was to express a coherent foreign policy for the United States. The other was to convince the House and the public at large that there was agreement within the Carter administration on such a policy.

The first, at least in very broad terms, Mr. Vance probably accomplished. He emphasized defense; he also made much of what the economy of the United States - once it is restored to full vitality - can accomplish for the world. And he made it clear that the United States prefers to negotiate rather than to exchange rhetoric or relapse into the re-peated confrontations of the cold war. At no time did he play down the fact of great divergences in world approach between the United States and the Soviet Union. But neither did he accept those differences as a permanent barrier to a permanent peace.

This, allowing for the many conflicting details that make up the real world as apart from the conceptual world, is a view of policy that is acceptable. But is it in fact the view of President Carter? Some committee members want to hear the other side of administration viewpoints from the president's security adviser. Mr. Brzezinski, And there is no doubt that Mr. Brzezinski has used stronger language, which Mr. Carter seemed to repeat, in his discussions of world politics.

This language has evoked echoes from the Soviet side. It is an example of how words can alter moods, even if they do not change the basic facts of a situation. For, in fundamentals, there are no real differences between what Mr. Vance has stated before Congress, Mr. Carter before the graduating class at Annapolis and Mr. Brzezinski on television. For instance, Mr. Carter's statement that the superpowers faced a choice between "confrontation and cooperation" was a simpler, rougher way of saying virtually the same thing as Mr. Vance's choice between an emphasis on the divergent elements of our relationship and an emphasis on the coopera-

But the choice of words, in diplomacy, is gravely important. It does help create emotions that affect actions, negatively or positively. It may facilitate or obstruct progress in concrete negotiations by wooing or alienating those who eventually must pay for any settlement, whether in prestige, in territory, in cash — or by the drumming guns that know no doubts. And therefore, while it is fairly clear that the bases of Washington's foreign policy are shared by those who, under President Carter, are charged with shaping that policy. Mr. Vance's words seem better fitted to achieve responsible national goals than a good many of those which have emerged from Mr. Carter and Mr. Brzezinski in recent weeks.

No Funeral for Detente

For perhaps the first time since Soviet-U.S. relations began to darken last year, the Soviet Union has come up with a statement that permits one to hope, cautiously, that Moscow may be getting the message. The statement was Pravda's commentary on Saturday. made in considered reply to Jimmy Carter's Annapolis speech of June 7. The message that Mr. Carter was trying to convey at Annapolis was that while the United States is eager to seek the benefits of detente, it insists on a measure of restraint in the strategic and political competition that the two powers will continue to conduct with each other anyway. The evidence that Moscow has gotten that message is hardly conclusive. These things never are. But there are promising signs.

First, while the Pravda commentary is full of warnings along the lines that "the present course of the United States is fraught with serious dangers." it does not write off President Carter or the prospects of improved relations with his administration. On the contrary, it describes what it perceives as Mr. Carter's new "tough line" as a "tactic" which has not yet developed "into a dangerous and uncontrollable political course," although it could. Asking rhetorically, "How will the Soviet Union respond to the toughening of American policy?" Pravda answers that Moscow "has chosen the road of peace and will not allow anyone to push it off this road.

"We do not accept the invitation to join the funeral of detente." And we don't exactly subscribe to Pravda's every word. But we do commend it for detecting a new "tough" note in U.S. policy, for understanding that toughness is not the only element of U.S. policy, and for wanting Americans to understand that the Soviet Union still wishes to pursue detente. That evades the question of the content of detente — but it is something.

Then, while Pravda says nothing reassuring about the pattern of Soviet (and Cuban) military moves in Africa that feeds one strain of U.S. anxiety, it addresses the source of a second strain: Moscow's buildup of conventional and strategic arms. And here it does not merely dismiss Western concern out of hand, but rather notes, accurately, that NATO's fear is "not of today but of tomorrow, that the Soviet Union might gain mili-tary superiority in the future." To which Pravda replies: "But the U.S.S.R. and its allies have no less grounds for anxiety about the morrow, particularly in the face of longterm programs adopted for modernizing and building up NATO's military potential."

We find that fascinating. It is a rare thing for Moscow to grant the legitimacy of U.S. anxieties and, further, to legitimatize them precisely by citing its own. For that matter, it does not happen often in Washington, either. With a rival who refuses to grant that one has grounds for apprehension, not much can be done. But that is not Moscow's pose how. It should not be Washington's.

One aspect of the Pravda commentary ought to be read attentively by Americans who argue, or fear, that a post-Vietnam, post-Watergate United States cannot muster the respect of either allies or adversaries. Threaded through the Soviet commentary is evidence to the contrary. Implicitly, if not explicitly. Pravda grants that the United States can launch new weapons programs, run an alliance, play the "China card" and in general mobilize for whatever challenges lie ahead. Far from mocking U.S. weakness, Pravda shows respect for U.S. strength. The Kremlin does not concede any weakness or inferiority of its own. But plainly, or so it seems to us, it wants to deal.

And that is good news. A modest, useful and essential version of detente is surely within reach, if the two sides can try a little harder. From the Kremlin it will take some restraint in Africa. From the White House it will take some restraint in attacking the internal Soviet order. From the two together it will take some devotion to their main common business, the controlling of strategic

Juan Carlos in Peking

Feting of royalty in a Communist capital provides an unusual sight but Peking has had royal visitors before. Even royal exiles have been there: Prince Sihanouk being the most notable among them. But King Juan Carlos of Spain is an unusual visitor. He was chosen by the staunchly anti-Communist Franco to rule over a staunchly anti-Communist nation. But this year, the presence of King Juan Carlos in Peking seems highly appropriate.

The Chinese, as all good Marxists, generally believe in world history. They believe that the many disparate events that characterize the temporary reality of world affairs are manifestations of a fundamental nature that links the entire world into an interconnected whole. The Chinese Communists see themselves as part of the revolutionary left but are convinced that if the struggle is to succeed, then enemies and friends must be discerned with care for they change with time and circumstances.

In the 1950s, not only did China share its world view with the Soviet Union but it also believed that its security depended on the Soviet nuclear umbrella. Its major trading partner was the Soviet Union and it shared the commitments of the Soviet Union.

The shift in their outlook has been slow but dramatic. In the 1960s, Peking had come to view both the Soviet Union and the United States as its major enemies. Right now the Chinese are convinced that only a strong Europe, which views the Soviet Union as its enemy, would lessen the Soviet threat to Chi-

King Juan Carlo's visit and Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping's sharp warning about nations seeking hegemony are further reaffirmations of Peking's world view, of its total commitment to neutralize the Soviet Union, pitting it in a state of permanent confrontation with the anti-Communist forces in Western Europe.

in economic policy, the resurgence of inflation has shifted the focus from reducing employment, where the administration was quite successful, to restraining prices. where the success so far is minimal. In social policy, the rising chorus

True Believers

.Whether it is a meeting of the mayors in Atlanta, labor lobbyists on Capitol Hill, former Vietnam war opponents now in mid-level administration jubs, or the Black Caucus at the Democratic National Committee, the questions are variants of a single theme: What is happening in the people we put in office? Where is the policy payoff for all we did?

True believers in the old, liberal faith, like George McGovern, shake their fists at the change and cry betraval. "In the past, in success and in adversity, the Democratic Party has stood proudly for the possibilities of progress," the 1972 nominee said last weekend. After the New Deal, the Fair Deal, the New Frontier and the Great Society. "we have not come this far to settle now for no deal."

Four Weeks of Celebration in the Name of Schubert

By David Stevens

TIENNA. June 20 (IHT) -Many of the great "Viennese" composers died in Vienna, but Franz Schubert was one of the few to be born and spend his life here. That, and the extraordinary range and volume of his music, gave this year's Vienna Festival a natural theme to mark the 150th anniversary of the composer's death.

Indeed, even the vast framework of this city's four festival weeks was hardly enough to do the theme justice. The symptonies were covered by various orchestras io the Musikverein, as were major chamber works, but the solo piano litera-ture got no systematic attention.

Theaters staged plays with Schubert's incidental music, new ballets were mounted to his scores, "Schubertiades" in different locales evoked the iotimate musical gatherings that played a large part in his

ONDON, June 20 (IHT) -Verdi's 15th opera, "Luisa Miller" (1847), had its first performance at Covent Garden last night sioce 1874, when the title role was sung by none other than Adeli-na Patti. There was uproarious applause, and a good deal of ecstatic shouting, too. But it was a success for the singers and the conduc-tor (Lorin Maazel, making a Royal Opera debut) rather than for the

It's hard to put one's finger on what is wrong with "Luisa Miller." about the cabal by which the father blackmails Luisa into a professed betrayal of her love to save her own father's skin.

But other operas have been more endearingly confected from equally grubby yarns. What is lacking, one suspects, is the melodic ennoblement that can raise such material above the level of the sordidly melodramauc. Not that "Ltrisa Miller" is anything but melodious.
There is melody from beginning to end. But there are not the movingly memorable and memorably moving melodies that have brought a treas-

Special praise is due Leo Nucci, a young Italian baritone who substituted for Ingvar Wixell at the last moment as Luisa's father, and turned in a memorable performance both vocally and dramatically. The same is to be said of Robert Lloyd, who took over from Gwynne Howell on short notice. Filippo Sanjust, tripling as producer, designer and light man, has staged the revival economically and unobtrusively, leaving it — appropriately with such a cast — to the singers to bring old-fashioned vocal splendor to an old-fashioned singers' opera.

"Luisa Miller" is only occasionally an orchestral opera, hut Mauzel made the most of the occasion and maintained a rhythmically tight and incisive performance.

One of the highlights of the chamber music cycle was the con-cert by the Haydn Trio that included the two magnificent piano trios from the last year of Schubert's life, as well as the elegiae Adagio that was originally conceived as a movement of the B-flat trio. The players

Bonn Aides List Policy Options

BONN. June 20 (AP-DJ) - The Wesi German government received today a package of proposals designed to boost long-term economic growth, one of which will likely be adapted by the Schmidt government to counter criticism at the July economic summit.

The Chamber of Commerce said it was a "helpful signpost" for the government noting that short-term economic policies would not work. The Federal Banking Association approved the proposals, saying "the government must again provide more negotiating room for pri-

The chief parliamentary economic spokesman of the oppositon Christian Democratic party said the panel's suggestions were in ac-cord with the party's views.

The panel's recommendations, all labeled possibilities, charted out the three main options available to the government in its bid to provide long-term stability and

 A restructuring of the federal income tax structure designed to lower the progressive tax steps. The move would release from 14 to 20 billion Deutsche marks into the system and, according to the panel, provide more work incentives.

 A change in corporate taxes to a profit formula, rather than a turnover base, with a concurrent tax cut thus spurring a much-needed rise in investment.

Boosting federal spending to spur new product development, which would in turn, spark investment and jobs.

All three proposals have been floated in government circles at times as options. The primary dif-ference between the government's stance and the panels is one of time. For instance, the government bas previously said an income-tax structure platform was needed, but Finance Minister Mattboefer has ruled out the enactment of such a proposal until 1980. Late today. Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said that a tax reform before January 1979 was technically impossible. The government has taken a cau-tious approach to what it will adapt at the July summit. "We are keeping our options open," Mattboefer said recently.

Economics Minister Otto Lambsdorff has said that the gov-ernment, in cabinet discussions, has considered all possibilities for the 1979 budget, including possible stimulative measures and tax cuts.

As a protective move, the government has postponed the date of the release of the budget proposal until July 26 from the original presummit release date of June 21.

Mr. Matthoefer said the delay will allow the government time to review summit results, analyze first half economic results and collect more data on expected tax reve-

Bank Profits Seen Hurt By California Tax Cut

NEW YORK. June 20 (AP-DJ) — When Californians voted June 6 to roll back and set a limit on property taxes, one of the snap judgments made on Wall Street was that the move would resumulate building and real-estate activity in that state.

Over time. California's new ceiting may well lure residents from other states but the near-term impact of Proposition 13 on real-estate business may be just the opposite of early expecwe believe the approval of the tax initiative could accelerate the cyclical slowdown of the California economy." said Lawrence Fuller, of Drexel Burnham Lambert. Proposition 13, slated to take effect July 1, reduces property taxes in the state to 1 percent of 1975-76 assessments, which are determined by full market value. It also limits to 2 percent per year any increase in the assessed value of property, except for new construction, improve-ments or property that is sold.

Turnover Decline Seen

Because property sold after July I will be assessed at current-market value, instead of at its 1975-76 value, "the turnover of and financing of existing residential properties should de-cline markedly." Mr. Fuller said. "This should reinforce our anticipated cyclical downturn in real-estate sales and financing in the second half," he added.

The $7 billion property-tax reduction is equal to about 4.3 percent of California's estimated $164 billion of disposable personal income this year. But Mr. Fuller doubts that it will relie the state of the state o make much difference. #### Alcoa Raises Prices 6.1%

PITTSBURGH, June 20 (AP-DJ) — The Aluminum Co. of America has acknowledged that it raised prices Friday an average of 6.1 percent on an extensive range of flatrolled aluminum products.

The increase, averaging 5.5 cents a pound for common alloy sheet, plate and foil, is effective with or-ders yesterday and shipments July 3. In addition, Alcoa said it increased prices an average 7.4 per-cent on a key type of "heat-treat-able" sheet and plate.

Sheet, plate and foil included in the increase accounted for about 31 percent of total 1977 industry shipments of 13.4 million pounds, according to the Aluminum Association, a trade group. These figures indicate that Alcoa's increases, if followed by the industry, could affect as much as one-third of total domestic shipments.

The Alcoa move appeared to catch other aluminum makers by surprise. A spokesman for Rey-nolds Metals said the company had not raised its prices and Kaiser had no immediate comment.

Steel Rises Cancelled

PITTSBURGH, June 20 (UPI)

NEW YORK, June 20 (AP-DJ) Asarco broke ranks today with kinc producers who hoped to hold prices at 31 cents a pound and reduced its price for prime western and high-grade slab zine by two cents to 29 cents a pound. Wheat was off 1½ to 3 cents; corn up 1½ to 1½; oats off 1¼ to 1¾, and soybeans up 4 to 10 cents.

Data Revised Up For 1st Quarter

fell 2.5 percent to a $102.4-billic. seasonally adjusted annual rate after rising 1.4 percent to an adjusted. $105 billion annual rate in the final quarter of 1977. Previously, the de-partment said corporate profits in this year's first quarter fell 2 per-cent to a $102.9-billion rate.

Real gross national product, the nation's output of goods and services adjusted for inflation, was at a $1.36-trillion adjusted rate in both the first quarter of 1978 and the fourth quarter last year. The de-partment had reported last month that GNP was at a $1.359-trillioo rate in the first quarter.

Inflation at 7%

The department reiterated that the coal strike and severe weather during the first quarter reduced the change in real GNP by about 2.5 to 3 percentage points from what it otherwise would have been. Real final sales decreased 1.7 percent in the quarter, slightly less than esti-mated previously but offset by an increase in inventory investment.

The department's estimate of in-flation — as calculated by a broad GNP-based measure — was 7 per-cent in the first quarter, less than the 7.1 percent previously estimat-ed and compared with an inflation rate of 5.9 percent in the 1977 fourth quarter.

For all of 1977, the inflation rate by the same measurement was 5.5 percent. Before adjustment for inflation, GNP increased at a 7. percent rate in the first quarter to an adjusted $1.995 trillion com-pared with an increase of 5.9 per-cent in last year's fourth quarter to a $1.962-trillion rate. Previously, the department said the first quarter increase was 6.6 percent.

Pre-tax corporate profits adjusted for depreciation and inventories at replacement cost to account for the effects of inflation fell 12.6 percent in the first quarter to an ad-justed $126.5-billion rate compared with a decline of 2.8 percent in last year's final quarter to a S144.8-bil-

Previously, the department said the first quarter was 12.4 percent. Profits before taxes in the first quarter declined 3.6 percent to an adjusted $171.9-billion rate after rising 3.2 percent in the 1977 fourth

Financial Officers Said to Favor Repeal Of U.S. Accounting Rules

NEW YORK, June 20 (AP-DJ) - More than half of the financial officers of major companies polled by the Conference Board favor repeal of a controversial set of accounting rules imposed two years ago by the Financial Accounting Standards Board.

The survey by the research group found that 60 financial executives of the 117 surveyed favored repeal of FASB Statement No. 8. The rule, probably the most controversial pronouncement the rules-making board has made, requires companies to report the effects of currency fluctuations quarterly and in a way that precludes use of reserves or accounting devices to lessen the effect of exchange-rate changes. The result has been some wide quarter-to-quarter earnings swings for a number of corpora-

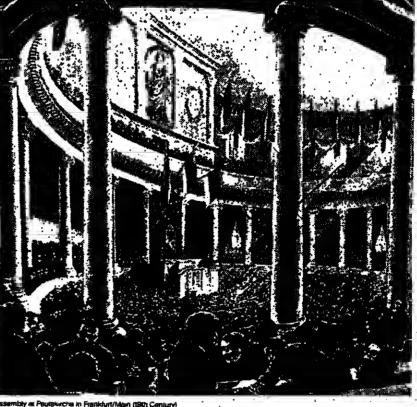

Another 24 executives want the rule modified, and 17 favor retaining it. The rest did not indicate strong feelings, mentioned disagreement on the issue within their companies or did not disclose their feelings.

Since the rule was imposed, executives complain that investors and stock-market analysts are confused by results reported under FASB 8, hurting their companies' securities in the stock market. U.S. Treasury officials recently have said they are studying the rule's effect, citing concern that it may be contributing to instability of the dollar.

The most common criticisms of FASB 8, according to the Conference

Board survey, are that it "distorts real operating results and provides misleading information," that it "leads to uneconomic changes in financeing methods" and that it "results in nonproductive activities." The method of valuing inventories at historical exchange rates and the immediate. recognition of foreign-exchange gains and losses were cited most frequently as provisions that should be changed, the board reported.

Great personal achievement has a lot in common with merchant banking at its best.

For the ultimate in financial advice experts tend to rely on a merchant

BHF-BANK traces its proud history to the mid-nineteenth century when its founders were among the most influential merchant bankers of their time: helping to build whole industries, from railways and steel companies to mining and exploration, acting as private clearing houses, opening up new markets in the far corners of the world and pro-viding sound advice on investment opportunities.

BHF-BANK serves nine out of ten top German concerns and its international corporate banking experts advise multinational companies around the world. It is active in most decisive financial centers, with own branches or subsidiaries in New York, Zurich, Luxembourg and the Cayman Islands as well as offices in many other strategic locations around the globe.

Although today's available financial instruments are more sophisticated, the basic values of BHF-BANK remain constant:

integrity, loyalty and personal responsibility with a flair for financial creativity.

For the unrivalled financial expertise of a management with personal liability, rely on a merchant banker. BHF-BANK.

CATHERINE, EMPRESS OF ALL THE RUSSLINS

Vincent Cronin, Morrow, Illustrated, 349 pp. $12.95.

Reviewed by Robert Kirsch

THOUGH her life is better documented than that of most rulers. Catherine the Great became the subject of legends which made her seem n cross between Lady Maebeth and a nymphomaniac, voracious for victims or lovers. Vin-cent Cronin, in this persuasive and balanced biography, suggests that these romanticized and vulgarized portraits are based on the work of o handful of French propagandists who io the years immediately fol-lowing Catherine's death spewed out propaganda when Republican France was fighting for its life against a coalition which included Russia.

Whatever the source, the legends found an audience. Popular biography, historical novels, and stage plays about Catherioe made her seem n freak or a grotesque. She was neither. Cronin. biographer of Louis XIV. Napoleon. of Louis and Marie Antoinette, sees her as both a great person and a great ruler, one of the most interesting and influential figures of the late 18th century and among the first of career women. She was not born to her power but struggled for it by leading a coup against a busband prepared to banish her. She was an active imaginative wise ruler who active, imaginative, wise ruler who brought Russia into modern times, reformed in almost every area of life from education to medical treatment, city planning to the arts and agriculture.

She found a place in her life not only for the work of reigning and ruling but also for the men she loved or needed for companiooship, for her home and for her family. It is a measure of some sort of unconscious sexism that Catherine was excoriated or mocked for activities for which male rulers are hardly ever criticized. She took lovers for the same reasons they took mistresses. She was a person who wanted affection and satisfaction but rarely allowed her relationships to dominate what she considered her obligations as empress.

These matters are not neglected by Cronin but they are put into perspective. He does not separate, as many have, the eventful private life from the full public one. "...Catherine the wiman and Catherine the ruler were one and the same person, and in order to achieve a full and balanced portrait I believe that both aspects of her life must be viewed as parts of a single whole."

Cronin examines carefully the mythology which has grown up around Catherine and her reign and even takes the frouble to nail the libel spread by the Saxon an--. hassador about the "cardhoard villages" allegedly huilt by Potemkin for Catherine's Crimean four. This was based on Potenkin's huilding houses suitable for Catherine's Crimean four. kin for Catherine's Crimean tour. This was based on Potenkin's rine to stay the night on her jour-ney. Potemkin's substantial nchievements are in harmony with the reforms Catherine sought.

Her accomplishments are set down in this sympathetic but not uncritical hiography. She is pictured here neither as a genius nor a fallen woman but as an energetic

A character, Quiroga, one whose telephooe would now be ringing in cessantly were it not for the isolanon the teams live in here. He hasn't spoken publicly about his job tomorrow night, but Marcos Calderon, the Peruvian manager, has assured us that Peru will play to win and that Quiroga will be the goalkeeper. Why not? he asks. No Hint of Suspicion

Thank heavens no one here has an evil mind, no one has suggested that Quiroga will have any kind of inducement to do anything other than his best. And, since from match to match that is completely erratic, we may never know after the event whether he did or not unless, that is, El Loco actually shuts out Argentina, an event considered highly unlikely here.

For Peru, it will be our last chance to applaud the colorful and cultured play of Teofilo Cuhillas, whose 30-yard passes inside the fullbacks are almost as spectacular as his 25-yard shots for goal.

The situation now is that, after two matches, Brazil and Argentina are level on points and Brazil leads the group by a single goal. Poland is third and has two points and manager Jacek Gmoch's computer tells him that the chances of qualifying are almost nil, but he must go for a victory over Brazil in order to stand a chance of equalling the third place Poland scored in 1974. Along comes Lopez, with a swing as sweet as her smile. At last, women's golf has a superstar. The golf world is giddy over this 21vear-old woman with something her cadely calls "ruthless concentration." Her galleries are swelling. and the more people who watch, the better she plays.

"I feel the vibrations from a crowd. I feel them pulling for me," said Lopez. "I can't believe it's all happening to me. I can't believe people are running after me for autographs. I love it, though." More than any other sport, golf hacks away at the mind, and here is where Lopez dominates her profession. There are many excellent drivers, chippers and putters on the tour, but no one else does it all so well as consistently, as easily as Lopez. She says this is partly because she has never taken a lesson. Terms like angle, path and fol-lowthrough don't clutter her mind

"The ladies tend to play 15 or 16 holes, not the whole 18. Nancy plays all of them. And she plays the devil out of the last four."

In her two years of college at the University of Tulsa, Lopez dated a baseball player named Roo Benedetti, who is still her boyfriend. He says there is no separating the person from the golfer, that it all works together. .

"I think her maturity has been the key to her success. She played too much amateur golf, and she knew when she was ready. She had it in the back of her mind to gradually become a superstar. She wasn't awed by the other golfers or the whole professional scene. And finishing second in ber first three tournaments sure helped.

"She's always known she was good, and now that she's on the pro tour, something has come out of her that couldn't come out before. It's not that she's playing out of her head. She's just finally getting the chance to play up to her potential."

BRUSSELS (IHT) — Together in their bright green T-shirts and shorts they form a forest on bicycles. Their aim is lofty—to focus public attention on the fact that the environment is on the focus public attention on the fact that the environment is on the brink of collapse. Yet Robert Yates, a taxi driver from Cbicago, says that his reason for pedaling 3,000 kilometers from Paris to Moscow is to lose 20 pounds. In the first week of the trip, which ended here, he gained one kilo and lost two spokes. The oldest member of the group, a 68-year-old Frenchman, lost his bicycle to thieves.

So far, however, the plan to crack the Iron Curtain on two wheels has gone remarkably well. The critical test will come in mid-July, when in Warsaw they will learn whether the Soviet Union will let them cross the border and continue to Moscow in shorts. They are hopeful.

There are 52 of them, ranging in age from 16 to 68 and represent-ing nine Western nations. Ten are retired: 14 are students. The rest spend their normal lives in various jobs - from architect to lumber-

The forest's head tree is Georges Krassovsky, 63. He is a French citizen of Russian descent. a retired teacher of physical education, the leader of similar forays in 1975 (from Paris to Assisi, Italy; "Saint Francis was the first ecologist") and 1976 (from Paris to Athens; "We did it to save the Mediterranean Sea") and the gray-haired image of youth. He makes certain his listeners understand that the Paris-Moscow project is nonpolitical. "We simply want to bring to-gether peoples of both East and West on the pressing question of the environment. Its destruction is obviously a problem that concerns all mankind, whatever their political persuasion.

Seven Capitals

The group effort takes them to seven European capitals — Paris, Brussels. Amsterdam, Bonn, Berlin (July 7), Warsaw (July 20) and Moscow (Aug. 5). Their return to Paris will be by train, and then they will pedal their cause through Scandinavia and England, "All of us are paying our own way," says Mr. Yates, who, agreeing with the other American on the trip. Rayleen Valery of Eugene, Ore, estimates his monthly expenses at $500. The group will find nourishment on a vegetaring dist, thereby sides tenning the need to cook. At ment on a vegetarian diet, thereby sidestepping the need to cook. At night, they camp in farmers' fields or in gymnasiums or in schools or in any other place found by supporters en route. They were toasted with champagne by no less than seven small-lown mayors between

Mr. Krassovsky. founder and editor of a Paris-based newspaper called "Combat Pour l'Homme," began agitating on environmental issues seven years ago. Peacefully but forcefully. He has made frequent raids into the French countryside, taking to the soapbox at the drop of a kickstand. In 1971, be composed a five-point "Manifesto for the Survival of Man" which many notables, including Rene Duniont, Yves Montand and Arthur Rubinstein, signed, Some 300,000 copies were distributed throughout France. But the Paris-

Moscow excursion in Mr. Krassovsky's tour de force, whose overriding "if" is whether the Soviet Union will let the group in. He has already received permission to travel through East Germany and Poland. He hopes, in fact, that some East Germans, Poles and Russians will join the group and pedal the last leg of the journey.

Whatever happens, the party will certainly make its ecology message known to whoever listens. It is the usual, tough-to-refute-but-seldom-acted-on argument that man may, if he continues to ignore the pleas of the environment itself, simple destroy his means of survival. But in spirit, it is something more.

Mr. Emercely is food of custing Peers Beriaust who mentioned

Mr. Krassovsky is fond of quoting Rene Barjavel, who mentioned the Paris-Moscow venture in a recent article in the French newspaper Journal du Dimanche, on competition in sport. He wrote: "There is another way for man to use his muscles, his bead and his heart. Not to stir up national rivalries but, on the contrary, to appease them, to try to earry friendship and fraternity beyond borders.

And, for some, the project is something less: an opportunity to

Prince Charles Declines Monaco's Invitation

The future king of England's re-fusal to attend Princess Caroline's wedding proved grist for the mill of gossip columnists who gleefully proclaimed that Monaco's blue blood must surely be botting over the incident. A Buckingham Palace spokesman said only that Prince Charles would be too busy to attend the wedding in Monaco June. Charles would be too busy to attend the wedding in Monaco June 28 of Princess Caroline. 21, and Philippe Junot. 38. "He has other engagements," the spokesman said, refusing to elaborate. But "Charles Snubs Wedding Princess." thundered the front-page headline in the London Daily Mirror, which went on to say that Caroline's mother, Princess Grace, was smarting from Princess Grace, was smarting from the "biggest royal snub of her life." The tabloid called the refusal a "final humiliation for the one-time Hollywood movie queen who has for years barbored the dream of seeing her eldest daughter marry the future king of England." After the "royal snub" beadlines appeared, another Buckingham Palace representative tried to ex-plain the prince's predicament. It seems he turned down his invitation to Princess Caroline's wedding because he got it too late, it clashed with his schedule and "he rarely goes to weddings," the spokeswom-an said. The idea of a royal snub was "nonsense," she said. Mostly was "nonsense," she said. Mostly the problem was that the invitation "arrived too late... two or three weeks ago." Prince Charles, she said, plans his schedule six months in advance. "I don't think he would have gone anyway. He rarely goes to weddings," she added. When Caroline plights her troth, the beir to the throne will be presiding at graduation ceremonies at a police academy in Oxfordshire, England.

Last week, because he was miffed over the size and lack of prominence of his name in advertisements for his new movie, "The Cheap Detective," Peter Falk refused to come down from Boston to attend a press junket arranged by Columbia Pictures to promote the movie. He apparently had a change of heart, however, for he surprised everyone by showing up for the New York news conference attended by 55 out-of-town movie writers. Columbia officials reported that the actor had apparently "cooled off" and answered ques-tions "affably" and "tirelessly,"

The Stones — led by Mick Jagger in red plastic pants and a white jacket — went through some old material and a few numbers from their new album, "Some Girls." for the enthusiastic full-house audience — some of whom paid scalpers up to $75 for $10 tickets. Toward the end of the show, Jagger picked up a fire bucket at each end of the mir-rored stage and splashed water over the audience - with no explana-

The city of Christchurch. New Zealand, is delighted with the gift left behind by Crown Princess Beatrix of the Netherlands — if only they knew what it was, Beatrix gave Mayor Hamish Hay the gift after her recent visit to the city. It is a sculptured glass ornament, Hay said. A less courteous city councillor described the royal of fering as "a giant glass eggcup." Hay said, "I'm a bit puzzled. don't know which way up it's sup posed to be so we have written if the Dutch Embassy to see if the
